Datascan rebuilt both our mobile patient-facing application and mobile pharmacy delivery application from the ground up. New look and added functionality.

Improving patient safety or outcomes

This is accomplished through redundancy and excellent communication between the pharmacy and its patients. We also have adherence dashboards and warning systems to help watch out for your patients' health.

Products and services that help pharmacies increase revenue opportunities and profitability

Helping to capture more refills, as well as automate processes to run the pharmacy with fewer tasks that require people to manually complete them. Our reporting and dashboards also help identify issues as well as opportunities.

Technology most helpful to pharmacy in 2025 and beyond

Patients want conveniences just like they get day in and day out through all of the mobile applications we tend to live on. Datascan recognizes this and is enhancing the mobile application features offered to patients, as well as building out a more robust delivery application for pharmacies to manage their deliveries with. We continue to build out features focused on offering your patients ease of doing business with you, as well as features that assist your pharmacy to automate most processes to accomplish more daily with less staff.

The strategic needs for pharmacy technology in the next three to five years

Everything is about efficiency within the pharmacy, while offering patients the ultimate in conveniences. Consumers are used to ease of use and convenience in their daily lives, whether they are using the Amazon app, their banking applications, or simply clicking a button to instantly watch a movie on Netflix. We are spoiled in our daily lives with such ease of use — and that is what independent pharmacies need to focus on offering their patients.
